

STASERA, DOMATTINA and others cool expressions

Let's start with STASERA

STASERA means "tonight" or "this evening", and we'll use this word whenever we need to talk about these times of the day.

...CAREFUL...

There is a substantial cultural difference between Italian and English speaking countries. What you'd refer to as "tonight" will in most cases be rendered in Italian with STASERA and almost never with STANOTTE (which literally means "Tonight").

Ci vediamo stasera alle 7.

I'll see you tonight at 7.

In Italian STASERA is good for anything that takes place before midnight.

▷ SOME EXAMPLES:

Ci vediamo stasera

I'll see you tonight / We'll see each other tonight!

Che fai stasera?

What are you doing tonight?

Stasera piove...

Tonight it's raining / Tonight it's going to rain.

Stasera alle 10 andiamo al cinema

Tonight at 10 we're going to the movies.

And now to DOMATTINA !

DOMATTINA means "tomorrow morning", and we'll use this word whenever we need to talk about this time of the day.

▷ SOME EXAMPLES:

Domattina vado al mare, vieni anche tu?

Tomorrow morning I'm going to the beach. Wanna come? (Are you coming too?)

Marco parte domattina

Marco is leaving tomorrow.

Domattina non ci sono

I'm not there/here tomorrow morning.

And what about DOPODOMANI? DOPODOMANI means "the day after tomorrow", and we'll use this word whenever we need to talk about this time of the week.

▷ SOME EXAMPLES:

La cena è dopodomani

Dinner is the day after tomorrow.

Dopodomani c'è il sole

The day after tomorrow is going to be sunny.

Sam arriva dopodomani

Sam gets here the day after tomorrow
